It was the most frightening experience of my life. I and my squad (Garret, Shane, Bill and, of course, me) decided to go to the near forest to observe of big bear which was living there. The idea was so intricate. We absolutely didn't know how to do this and my friend Bill, which had interesting complexion of face and neat stubble on his cheeks, said:

-Hey, guys, maybe we just set some cameras there and ~~test~~ ~~might~~ take them in two days?

It sounded good and we were going to go to the forest next morning. It

In the beginning, all was okay. We found where approximately the bear lived and put our cameras over there. But we were obsessed with idea to look at the animal in real life. We sit ~~at~~ ~~sat~~ behind pins and started to wait for our target.

Suddenly, Bill exclaimed:

-Men, did you hear that noise?

-No, we didn't. - <sup>we</sup> replied.

But in a few minutes we've been running from the big scary dreadfull bear. Compared with us, it had high agility and speed. Thanks to our fear we ran fast too.

Oh my Godness, I can't even explain what we felt at the moment. Luckily, we all were fine. Although, Shane, when he ~~was~~ ran away, broke his leg and scuffed his cheek but because of his black beard it wasn't noticed.

In conclusion, I would say that it was the most unforgettable and frightening day in my life.
